Microsoft has become the successful company that it is today because of creative ideas careful planning attention to detail during development and testing of their products and quality output far superior to its competitor s products and services. Even after the release of a product Microsoft continues to assist the consumer by providing continuous support and assistance through the Internet email and customer support. As a consumer of many of Microsoft s products and services in NO way have I been harmed in the manner the government s law suit states. The Democratic party and its notion that the government should be in control of everyone and their money is the real monopoly. I also feel this law suit is just the government s first step in an attempt to ultimately control the Internet. It s obvious the government and laws have not been able to keep pace with technology and this law suit is just a way for them to slow down the rapid advancement it can t keep up with. Microsoft should be free to continue to make their creative ideas become a reality. Ending this law suit will only aid in the swift recovery of our economy and that will benefit everyone even Microsoft s competition. Lisa A. Harpold Overland Park KS
